Mites in this family are responsible for producing galls and dense patches of hair or beadlike growth called erinea on a number of plants. Several commonly seen galls are: maple spindle gall, maple bladder gall, and erineum on maple.

Management: Treatment is not usually not necessary, as lasting harm to plants rarely occurs.